

'Toys for Tot' Drive Moving Into High Gear

The Marine Corps Reserve's annual "Toys for Tots" drive moves into high gear this week, as thousands of toys are filling barrels at stores and fire stations. The playthings are ticketed for distribution to thousands of less fortunate children at Christmas.

Company, local USMCR unit, reports that the toys are being taken from the collection points to Marine Reserve training centers where they are sorted and delivered to charity organizations that will make final distribution.

"Response has been encouraging," comments Captain R. R. Crittendon, unit information officer, "but much more has to be done if this is going to be a Merry Christmas for all the youngsters."
